Cancer Crusade Underway

Not too many years ago, a physician would not have been able to find among his patients many who had been cured of cancer.

The situation is changed now. Indeed, in the United States right now there are more than a million and a half cured cancer patients.

Limited Parking On Church Street

The Appomattox County High School and the business community along Church St. near the High School have expressed concern about the growing problem regarding on-street student parking. Although adequate off-street parking space is available to the students many students still park along streets adjacent to the school. This not only creates a safety problem for the student himself, but also creates a parking problem for the business and resident community along these streets.

The Town of Appomattox, therefore, has erected limited parking signs along Highland Street and has requested that the State Highway Department erect such signs along both sides of Church St. from the High School to its intersection with Atwood St.

Above Normal Rate of Saving

NEW YORK - From a financial standpoint, residents of Appomattox county are in better shape today than for some time.

As a whole, they have been living well within their means spending much less than they have been earning.

Some of their surplus cash has been used to reduce their consumer debt. As for the remainder, most of it has been going into savings.

The extent to which they have been putting money aside is evidenced by the increase in their bank deposits, in their savings and loan accounts and in their purchases of U. S. savings bonds.

In the past year alone, Appomattox County families stashed away some $831,000 in liquid assets of this type, it is estimated.

Although this was well above their normal rate of saving, it was less than in the previous year, when uncertainty about jobs and economic conditions in general led them to post-pone most non-essential spending.

As a result, their savings rose to record proportions.

The figures are based upon national findings reported by the Federal Reserve Board and the Commerce Department are upon the latest income and
